The Herd of Mechanical Creatures

Walking Act. Art Installation. Mobile Theater

They file past slowly. Stamping, munching, steaming. Pinions rotate, chains clank, metallic eyes gleam. Herdsmen try to keep the herd of mechanical creatures on course. One breaks away, a young one falls behind. Changing pastures, moving down from the mountain or the road to the slaughterhouse?

Whirring and buzzing, the animals wind their way towards an uncertain future. Yesterday modern, today nothing but scrap metal – the harsh reality of our times.

Having come to life from recycled bikes, these installations are the visualisation of technical progress, questioning the sense of it. A reflection of the up-to-date way of dealing with scarce resources and a criticism of our blind faith in technology.

A walk act where the performing arts meets visual art. A snatch of deceleration, slowness and durability.

2-5 actors und 4-8 mechanical creatures. In- and outdoor

The Gentlemen

Walking Act

Machos or Mafiosi? Womanizer or Men in Black? Each of them is the very picture of a man. Elegantly they move between the guests, charming, without speaking but with a lot of humorous communication: They have more to say than you might have expected: Have we met before? Don't worry! May I have the pleasure of the next dance? Young man, you want to pop this power-pill?

Further possible assignments

Entrance

A red carpet. Decent but at the same time conspicuous "The Gentlemen" take care of the security at the entrance. The guests are discretely controlled a bit and they have to follow some funny orders. If you want we can bring out the red carpet and bring some stylish barriers as well.

Bodyguards

A special guest is accompanied to the stage. "The Gentlemen" will "prepare" him for his speech.

Taking photos of "The Gentlemen" with your guests

After quickly dressing them "properly" with accessories like hats, cigar, glasses, gold rings, your guest will be photographed and gets a copy of the photo.

Two to seven actors

Die Quassler (The Gabblers)

Comedy – walking act of an alien tourist group

Where they come from nobody can tell.
Curiously they explore everything that is new and alien to them.
Are you watching them or are you rather being watched yourself?
Who is taking a photograph of whom?
Everything is examined in detail.

Many questions are being asked. But you don't understand a word.
Which language is it after all that these aliens speak, with their strange voices?
They come in peace!

Some things that seem to be common to us are sensational to "The Gabblers".
If they are interested in something, they watch it and take photos of it.
These alien tourists also enjoy taking photos of a group of new friends.

The Service Superheroes

Visual Comedy Show full of super heroes in a world without service

Coming out of the blue the three "Service Super Heroes", jetting around with their neat service-mobiles, will over-service everything. For they are Super Heroes, aren't they? Fast as lightening they react to any critical lack of service. Saving you whether you need it or not they will give you a healthy wellness laugh for free.

The idea of this speedy show is the currently perverted common understanding of service. Everyone talks about it but no one does really offer it. For the "Service Super Heroes" the customer is still the king, in an interactive show that motivates you to participate and enjoy yourself getting super-served in a classical street theater situation.

The "Service Super Heroes" carry you away with their bizarre adaption of proper service for Comedy-Slapstick executed by a Superhero.

Die Neandertaler (The Cavemen)

An impetuous walking act with a wooden bike

The cavemen are travelling around on their genuinely prehistorical wooden bike. There is a hidden beast lurking in everyone. Sometimes the cavemen are untamed, sometimes foolish and always hilarious.

They seem to be barbaric and impetuous. With great fun they invade the audience. Some people wouldn't believe their eyes. They are proud of their wooden bike. They like to invite the audience to have a ride with them.

"The cavemen" seem to be simpleminded, naive and charming whenever they curiously examine the most common things without having a clue what it really is. They are misunderstanding all communication on purpose with a twinkling in their eyes.

Two to four actors

Moon, Werewolf and Vampire

Stiltwalking Characters

They have their heads up in the clouds sometimes, but they are always present. The werewolf naively fools around with the audience and plays his tricks on them whereas the moon is selfconscious of his fantastical beauty and he is enchanting his audience with his movements and impressions. And the vampire have the overview for himself... Back in reality the moon protects the werewolf and takes care of him if he is going too far with his jokes.
A conspicuous and playful walkact.

Also available as the aesthetical solo show “Moon Dance”

Room must be higher than 5m (less is possible according to agreement)

One to two actors

Patrona Bavaria and the Lion

Bavarian Walking Act on stiltz

Did you know?

As an allegorical figure, Bavaria represents the country as a whole, personified as a woman. She has been depicted in a number of ways but our version is modelled on the bronze statue on the Theresienwiese in Munich which has been commissioned by King Ludwig I. Designed and crafted between 1843 and 1850 by Leo von Klenze and Ludwig Schwantaler (design and model making) and Johan Baptist Stiglmaier and his nephew Ferdinand von Miller (casters of bronze), this Bavaria was the first colossal statue made of bronze since antiquity - and a technical masterpiece.

Being artists from Munich specialising in crafting and designing extraordinary costumes we are happy to present you our version of Bavaria (on stilts) and her lion.

Notes: Who is foolpool?

Extraordinary ideas, exquisite costumes, a well-rehearsed and trained team: foolpool are so convincing because of the exceptional quality of their artistic programs.

Cheeky, straightforward without any doubt! This is the motto of these five artists from Munich with their high quality Walking Acts and their high energy show events performed all over the world, at galas as well as street shows.

foolpool – the Munich artists ensemble

The fine result of five very different people and characters from Munich coming together to build a foolpool can be seen by the audience at very different but always most entertaining performances - throughout the world at various cultural and commercial events.

Their customers are global players like BMW, Siemens, Manitowoc or music halls like GOP Variete, Schmidt-Variete Hamburg and Chamäleon-Variete Berlin, as well as international street theatre festivals like the Daidogai Worldcup Festival in Shizuoka, Japan, or the International Street Show Festival in Bangkok, to name but a few.

Chaos is combined with cool stuff, beasts meet art, extraterrestrials are down to earth. But no matter how much of each of those elements are put together by these versatile artists there is one thing for sure:

They score superbly with the audience. Always and at any occasion they have an ace up their sleeve inspiring their audience - and they delight youngsters as well as parents and grandparents with their show.

Being so competent is a result of successfully performing for more than 25 years now. Again and again they will surprise you with their new acts. Right now their top acts are “The Gentlemen” and “The Quassler (The Gabblers)”, but their proven acts like “The Chaos Circus Comedy Show” or the walkact “The Cavemen” will still bring the house down.

An actual act they perform for street theatre as well as big stages: “The Service Superheroes”. It is a visual comedy performance about Superheroes.

Meanwhile they go new ways with their new production “The Herd of Mechanical Creatures”. This act is a mixture between walking act, art installation and performance.

So we are keen to hear what the creative minds of foolpool will bring up next to entertain us.
